The SICC is a division of the General Division of the Singapore High Court and part of the Supreme Court of Singapore designed to deal with transnational commercial disputes. It is a superior court of law built on the foundations of a legal and judicial system that has been highly regarded and favourably ranked in international surveys conducted by, among others, the Swiss-based International Institute for Management Development and the Hong Kong-based Political and Economic Risk Consultancy.

I teach a course in International Investment Law at the Royal University of Law and Economics. The course is a part of a dual post graduate degree in business law by the Royal University and the Free University of Brussels. As part of my teaching commitments, I supervise research projects and design and upgrade the course on an annual basis to ensure that the course meets the requirements of the changing investment environment in Southeast Asia.
